

Podcast Name: The Isle of Imaginaria

Episode Name: Chapter 3 - Beat Boks

This chapter starts off with Markie following Crow into the dark palace. While very grand, the palace contained very few items and didn't seem like the kind of palace she had imagined it would be. It looked a lot more like a museum. But why was the palace closed? And where was Crow? She found him in a hallway and continued to follow him. The walls contained many paintings of members from the royal family, and the halls were lined with different artifacts. She wondered why it had been so long since the last kite fight.

Markie found a room containing all the athletes' clothing from the land of Dan of the past kite fights. She marveled at the different colors of all the clothing and observed how they had evolved over the years. Approaching a dark corner, she began to notice other types of clothing that were more black, brown, and grey. Markie found a tall gown, veil, and crown belonging to the queen of old. She approached the gown to read a plaque and the gown vibrated as she drew closer.

Meanwhile, her mom, Annie, and Aunt Delia discovered Markie's runaway note. They were very desperate to find Markie and searched the boardwalk for her. While searching, they noticed a trail of birdseed and followed it, hoping it would lead them to Markie. Instead, it led them to a man named Dan on stilts who expressed that they had missed Markey by ten minutes. He had seen her climb the wall and enter into the kite museum. Together, Dan, Annie, and Dalia entered into the museum to find Markie.

The ride back home was a very unpleasant one for Markie. Her mother was extremely upset about her running away. As her mother lectured to her, Markie felt frustrated at the lack of understanding her mom had about the situation. At home, her mother told her she was grounded and that they would continue the conversation in the morning. However, before she could get to her room, Markie heard a voice. She looked down to see a small cabbage who introduced himself as Baby Bok. He told her that his friends call him Five. After introducing herself, Markie asked her new friend what he was doing there. He explained that he was there for work. His job was to pick the produce from aunt Delia's garden to take to the market with his dad each morning. Markie explained her day to Five and her failed attempt to go exploring. After hearing this, Five invited her to come explore with him after he took produce to the market the next morning. Knowing that she didn't want to get into any more trouble, Markie responded by saying no.

However, after Five left, Markie wondered if maybe she should go explore with Five. The next morning, she made her decision. She left yet another note for her mother telling her she would be gone. She found Five outside and joined him in jumping in the back of a truck. As soon as the door shut, the truck came to life and out of boxes jumped carrots, brussel sprouts, beats, and other vegetables who all yelled, "hooray!" She watched as they danced and hollered and beat boxed together. As soon as the truck came to the market, the vegetables got back into their boxes. Five opened the back door and slid out before the truck came to a spot.

“I thought I’d give you a quick tour while everyone unloads. You’ll love this place! Come on!”...
